TotalRecall Publishing. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 110 pages. Dimensions: 8.6in. x 5.8in. x 0.3in. Okay, I never raced and, honestly, at best I m barely an auto mechanic. But I m not new to auto racing. My father, Samuel, owned an auto parts store and was a truly talented mechanic who built and owned stock cars that raced at the old West Peabody Speedway in Massachusetts. We spent Saturday evenings at that track. I spent endless hours making wooden soapbox derby racers. And well before NASCAR was so popular, we spent every Memorial Day weekend glued to the radio and later the TV to hear the Indy. In 1953, when I was just ten, my father built the first micro-midget race car in our hometown of Beverly. To the great annoyance of the neighbors and local police, I raced it all over town. On a straightaway at the Beverly Airport, we pushed it up toward 30 about the same speed the first racecars hit when Olds brought his racer to Ormond Beach, Florida, for the first-ever auto race in 1903. Who would have thought an auto mechanic s son would become a dedicated poet But that s what happened, and a later-life moment provided the inspiration for this new book of poems. In a conversation not long before my father passed away (at the age of 89) he confessed to me, I never understood your poetry! That set me on a project to write a book of short pieces of poetry that would appeal to everyone, particularly auto racing fans. The book is based on my researching a lot of racing history, interviews with fans, drivers, crews, lots of time at NASCAR events. I suppose I should also admit that I indulged myself and spent way too much money fixing...
